about 50 kilometers inland from the Arctic Sea. There are large and small lakes in the area The lakes increase in number north of the factory region. The factories are built in very hilly terrain, and the natural heights were used in underground construction of each unit.	50X1-HUM

- 2. Each of the seven factories occupies an area estimated at 1 to 2 square kilometers, and all are interconnected by a chain of tunnels and railway lines. The total area of the factory complex is estimated at 500 to 600 square kilometers, and includes airfields and fields for motor vehicles. The area is hermetically closed off from the outside world by six lines of iron and barbed-wire fence, with soldiers constantly patrolling between the lines of fencing. The enclosed area is strongly illuminated at night.
- 5. Known products of the factories include tanks and jet planes. Each building is equipped with completely modern machinery, lighting, power and railway facilities.
- 4. German prisoners of war and conscripted workers from Germany provide the labor force for the Duroscee plants. There are about 20,000 German women in the area as laboreres and about 50,000 German soldiers. The plane factories use skilled German technicians forcibly imported from Germany. One of the workers' barracks is occupied at least in part by engineers and other technical workers from the former plane factories at Dessau.
- 5. The Duroscee complex is reportedly one of five or six similar establishments along the coast of the Arctic Sea.
